Hongkong, October 9th, 1878.

Ir is interesting and also important at this juncture, when humanitarian ideas seem to -rule the Governmental policy, to refer to the inal haunts and places of refuge in the colony, and very able Report of the Police Commission which sat, in 1872 and see what is there said with regard to the punishment of criminals. The Hon. T. C. HAYLLAR, Q.C., was Chairman of that Commission, and, if we opinions therein expressed, consequently, may fairly be considered to have his full concurrence. How different those opinions are from the views entertained by His Excellency the Governor, for whom Mr. HAYLLAR appeared a few extracts from the report in question. First as to flogging, the Commission say: Yours, &c., It is in its deterrent aspect that the Commission regard our system of punishment as altogether failing. A sentiment of humanity, very much inisplaced when we come to deal with a race that misunderstand it, and regard it as a sign of weakness, has always stood in the way of the free infliction of the penalty which the Chinaman particularly dreads, that of the lash: Its inexerable application to one class of offences excoodingly common in former yours, that of wrenching organizate from women's care, has caused that crime to disappear almost entirely from the criminal calendar, and highway robberies with violence have undergone marked diminution from the same cause. The Commission can see no reason why this useful mode of punishment should not be extended indefinitely. Commont upon this is unnecessary. Nothing could be more in accord with the sentimentsexpressed at the public meeting on Monday. With regard to branding and deportation.

Many difficulties exist in the way of a ready ideatification of thieves who have been already convicted. It not infrequently happens that a few desperate churacters, whose clarities in villainy has received the public meeting be requested to allow some and at the foot of Mount Davis is a junk on head, face, and hands; he then coils his tail upon those who had appeared on the battlefield ceration, come out of gaol and terrorise the Colony on the occasion. The meeting then broke up. to the depth of eight or ten inches, but the allegiance to a foreign yoke, and puts on a comical so far that any mun who has appeared in the field an imprisonment for some heavy offered towards the West, in the direction the restoration of peace in Kiushiu, a grand men as these conspicuously marked, they would doubtless be compolled to seek their livelihood elsewhere, or their career of evil would probably be cut short here. The Commission think that the beneficial nature of the scheme of branding which was plied with they said they did not see the use of the Artillery Parade Ground, North Bar to say, "Our ears are open to receive instruct quently there were horse-races, wrestling, and a Donnell was unquestionable, and that to its abandon. had been a preconcerted plan to gag a free and Yard; here one sampan and a cargo boat were the walls are adorned with scrolls in Chinese, for three days. violent crimes which agitated the Colony in the sum. or to stultify the object of the meeting, I and abated. The Commission had little faith in the nossible reformation of criminals from the of view, they proceed:-Of course branding should be resorted to only in the cases of those men whose exteer, or the nature of whose crime makes it evident that no reasonable hope of their reformation can be entertained. It must not be supposed, however, that the effect of fixing a stigma of this kind would be the same liere us in England. Within the Calony it might, and in all probability employment. But there seems no good reason to the punishment of the foreigner. There are only too many, at any time, within the walls of the gaol, to whom, the Commission believe it is idle to offer any locus numitenties. For the such are migratory strangers whose this or any place is the opportunity for It is not to our laws or mismanagement. rafficus owe their criminal education. Many of them before they come here are too probably deeply stained with orime, and it seems, to say the east of it, somewhat hard that the honest industry and enterprise of the Colony should, in deference to an overstrained sentiment, he heavily burdened to keep up enormous. Police and Gaol establishments, to look after and provide board and lodging for immigrants of this description, when a little more judicious severity might afford reasonable means of getting rid of them altogether. Branding would, beyond doubt, greatly assist this desirable object. "

MONDAY'S MEETING.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "DAILY PRESS." SIR,-What I wanted to say yesterday, but rrough inexperience of public meetings was unable to bring out in order, amounted to this. That if the police are not allowed to arrest suspicious persons how can they be blamed for increase of orime. As to deportation, the photograph system may be very well at home but life here is shorter, police and gaol officials are not here long enough to remember a very old offender. and changes are more frequent than at home Then what is the use of deporting a criminal if you do not offectually brand him or send him where he will not be likely to return. These deported folous are thoroughly acquainted with the crimi they return, and, what is worse, probably return in company with their criminal friends from the mainland. As flogging on the breech seems to be allowed by H.E. the Governor why not also have branding on the breech? The most wretchedly abject native generally has at least a piece of rag big enough to conceal the locality of are not mistaken, drafted the report. The such a brand, so that this plan would not be open to the objection raised against branding behind the car that it prevents reformation of the criminal by preventing him obtaining honest employment. I also wanted to say that to my own knowledge great efforts had been made by certain unworthy persons to cause dissension between the native and foreign portions of the community. Howas an apologist on Monday, will be seen by ever learned these towers of discord may have been, their mean, unmanly trick has happily been frustrated in the natural order of things,- 16th Soutember. am very sorry to have to represent my former favourable letter on the excellent prospects of our harvest as premature. Since i was sent you, deluges of rain have converted streamlets into rivers, and rivers into lakes, have brown down numerous houses, and carried away Hwun on the north, the port of Newchwang on the south, the main branch of the Sine on the west, and the hills on the east, the fairest and far the richest portion of Liaotung, may be represented as all under water for the better part of a month. The main rivers were from five to ten feet higher than the level of their normal flood. Only a small proportion of the tall millet shall be gathered in over a very large area of the ground indicated, while the small millet, yellow millet, and pulse grops are all but totally rotted. These latter were completely under water over most of that area. It is extremely difficult to estimate what amount of erop may be gathered in off these fields, but if the farmers will average a fifth of a full year I think they will do well. The further north the better, for though Moukden is only 150 feet

When the police force was determined upon as a means of preserving order in the district of Lebanon, it was resolved that the men should be dressed in uniform, and tenders were invited in Beyrout for 1,500 infantry and 500 mounted suits, of a certain quality and of a certain make. Three or four tenders were forthcoming, and one of these was accepted. But it was very shortly discovered that the tenders, although made in the horrowed names of certain native firms in Beyrout, did, in point of fact, emanate from certain officials connected with Daoud Pasha's government, and that a regular stock exchange, or bourse, was being held every day within the precincts of the palace at Beited-Deen, for the purpose of buying and selling these tenders; that one of the latter, which had been accepted, was found to have changed hands no less than three times, each rate at a price which was a reduction upon the former prices, so much so that the present holder of the contract could ing of the requisite quality without an immense personal loss to himself.
